Kylie founded Workwell in 2021, bringing a unique no-nonsense behavioral science approach to helping clients develop their own individual leadership style, as well as cultivating and enhancing their teams and building their organizations.

She is a compelling and entertaining speaker; an astute and compassionate listener; and a thoughtful strategic partner for your organizational needs.

Kylie has a Bachelor of Arts and Law from Sydney University and a Masters in Organizational Behavior and Development from IDC and has been providing exclusive management consulting services for the past 10 years to international corporations such as Cisco, Intel and Siemens; global non-profits such as JDC and the Schusterman Foundation; and government agencies such as the Israeli Ministry of Diaspora Affairs and the American Embassy.

Kylie began her career as an intellectual property and commercial lawyer, working for several years in Israel's booming hi-tech sector with a high-profile Jerusalem law firm and serving as in-house counsel for the Hebrew University's intellectual property commercialization company.

In 2004 she was recruited as a Senior Associate of International Relations by a large New York-based global non-profit, the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee (JDC). At JDC Kylie managed partnerships with major donors and foundations, later serving as Director of Education and Training for the International Relations division and as a consultant to JDC's Global Human Resources division.

In 2013, Kylie joined the boutique Israeli consulting firm, Message Experts and developed expertise running leadership workshops, executive coaching and training, staff retreats, conferences and strategic planning processes.

Kylie lives in Jerusalem with her husband, Boaz, who runs a venture capital fund, and together they have five children and a very large Rhodesian Ridgeback dog called 'Mambo'. Kylie also serves as the Chair of Mavoi Satum, a nonprofit that works to address social and religious inequality in the Israeli legal system. She is a founding member of JFN's funders forum advocating for greater philanthropic investment in women.
